Then transfer to the hotel, the La Fonda on the Plaza, a Four Diamond Rating Luxury Hotel. After a delicious breakfast buffet at the hotel, our professional local guide will take us on a full day tour to Taos, which offers a vivid experience of the Southwest: stunning scenery, rich artistic traditions, and Taos Pueblo - the oldest inhabited building in the United States. The Taos tour is as much about the journey as about the actual visit to the town of Taos and the Taos Indian Pueblo.

We'll travel through the Sangre de Cristo Mountains on the scenic "High Road" with breathtaking views as we climb to over 9,000 feet in elevation. Picturesque villages dot our route where long time settlers and more recently arrived artists reside in the beauty of the landscape. We'll make a brief visit to the Santuario de Chimayo, a pilgrimage site for those who seek healing.

Once in Taos, we'll enjoy lunch on your own in a downtown restaurant and have some time to visit Taos' famous galleries. Taos is the original center of New Mexico's art world. We'll proceed to Taos Pueblo to visit a Pueblo Indian village that has stood largely unchanged since prehistoric times and has been designated a UNESCO site. A native guide will provide a walking tour of the village. Our return journey is equally scenic as we travel back to Santa Fe via the Rio Grande Gorge and follow the river through the Espanola Valley.
